

Our True Disability Story

My Superhero with Wheels

By Lawrence Morello

Illustrations Fernando Coello

Title

My Superhero With Wheels

© Lawrence Morello 2026

© Illustrations: Fernando Coello 2026

Text

Lawrence Morello

Illustrations

Fernando Coello

The illustrations in this book were created using some AI assistance.

<https://www.themsreset.com>

First edition: March 2026

ISBN: 9798247486831

When I was a baby, Daddy carried me everywhere.
He walked slower than most dads, but his arms never wavered.
His hugs felt safe — soft, warm, steady.
Mom said Daddy has something called Multiple Sclerosis.

“Multiple what?” I asked, my voice small and full of questions. Daddy smiled — that calm smile that tells you everything’s okay. “It means my body works a little differently,” he said.

“Sometimes my legs or hands don’t listen the way I want them to”. He said it like a secret between us — something special, not scary.

When I turned two, Daddy started using a cane.
It made a little tap-tap sound everywhere we went.
I loved that sound. It meant Daddy was near.

His hand held mine, and his cane kept rhythm beside us as we walked

